projects	2020-	(with Mark Yanis, Attorney, California Appeals Court & Lawrence Solan, Professor Brooklyn Law School) We are designing and running studies on the effect on "guilty" verdicts of including the quantifier "each" in a California jury instruction.
	2020-	(with the Massachusetts Superior Court Model Jury Instructions Committee, Judge Kathe Tuttman, Chair) We are editing three sets of jury instructions: Criminal, Civil, & General, to resolve ambiguities, eliminate "legalese" and improve comprehension.
	2019-	Massachusetts District Court We are consulting with judges about how to word new jury instructions to avoid bias.
	2017	 The Syntax of Justice: Law, Language, Access & Exclusion. We co-organized a two-day conference with the Northeastern U. School of Law, Boston. March. Our lab members presented: a) "Sounding Black": The Legal Implications of Linguistic Profiling. by Research Assistants: Abbie MacNeal, Katherine Fiallo, Alexander Jones, Shaughnessy Jones, Samantha Laureano, Matthew Monjarrez, & Yian Xu. b) The preponderance of the WHAT? Legalese, meet Linguistics. by Janet Randall, P.I.
	2010-	Massachusetts Bar Association In order to to evaluate and rewrite Massachusetts civil jury instructions, we have been running many studies on two versions of a sampling of instructions to identify the linguistics factors that impede comprehension.
